

ABSTRACT

J Clin Ultrasound. 2022 Aug 5. doi: 10.1002/jcu.23278. Online ahead of print.

Prenatally detected congenital medulloblastoma.

Moradi B(1)(2), Hamidian Y(3), Soltanghoraee H(4), Katouli FS(1)(5).

Author information:

(1)Advanced Diagnostic and Interventional Radiology Research Center (ADIR), Tehran University of Medical Sciences, Tehran, Iran.

(2)Department of Radiology, Yas Complex Hospital, Tehran University of Medical Sciences, Tehran, Iran.

(3)Fetal Health Research Center, Hope generation Foundation, Tehran, Iran.

(4)Reproductive Biotechnology Research Center, Avicenna Research Institute, ACECR, Tehran, Iran.

(5)Department of Radiology, Arash Women Hospital, Tehran University of Medical Sciences, Tehran, Iran.

We describe a congenital cerebellar mass in a fetus at 30 weeks GA. The lesion is detected at the prenatal third-trimester ultrasound, confirmed by fetal MRI, and determined as medulloblastoma in postmortem pathologic evaluation.

© 2022 Wiley Periodicals LLC.

DOI: 10.1002/jcu.23278

PMID: 35930477